COOL ME, MADAM

Old women once held curative powers-or so folks believed. Their wrinkled hands laid on feverish brows were thought to cool the fever. Now, in this golden era of modern medicine, we have more reliable methods of reducing temperatures. But, remember, a temperature is only a symptom . . . not an illness in itself. Fevers have many causes . . . some minor . . . some serious. So, be sensible. When you or a member of your family is ill, let your doctor do the diagnosing and prescribing. Then, if medication is necessary, let us fill his prescription promptly and accurately.

He was as frisky as ever when he retired from medical-survival service last summer. Then came New Hotel Manager, 18, word that the society had designated him as the year's top dog in research. Last week a Tulane representative in Chicago made year-old Diana Francis was arrangements for presentation of the award.

Whether Big Ben was stolen, or ran away and perhaps was killed in traffic, no one knows.

But if he isn't found the award or posthumously.

Re-Use of Water Seen as Problem Coming in Future

CINCINNATI (AP) - Maximum re-use of water will soon become a major problem, a top health authority warned members of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

Speaking before the final session of the institute's annual convention here Wednesday, Dr. Mark D. Hollis of Washington, assistant surgeon-general of the U.S. Public Health Service, said this particularly will be the case once major population increases are felt and if present trends toward urbanization continue.

Today's average urban dweller requires 140 gallons of water for his personal day-to-day needs, Dr. Hollis said, adding "when we add to this the water required to prodice the things he eats and wears and uses, his individual needs reach some 1,500 gallons a day. Our present total water requirement is expected to double by handing out bonuses this year. Only a handful say they are discontinuing the practice because of the recent recession.

Re-Use of Water Seen as Problem Coming in Future

CINCINNATI (AP) - Maximum re-use of water will soon become a major problem, a top health authority warned members of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

Speaking before the final session of the institute's annual convention here Wednesday, Dr. Mark D. Hollis of Washington, assistant surgeon-general of the U.S. Public Health Service, said this particularly will be the case once major population increases are felt and if present trends toward urbanization continue.

Today's average urban dweller requires 140 gallons of water for his personal day-to-day needs, Dr. Hollis said, adding "when we add to this the water required to prodice the things he eats and wears and uses, his individual needs reach some 1,500 gallons a day. Our present total water requirement is expected to double by handing out bonuses this year. Only a handful say they are discontinuing the practice because of the recent recession.

Even alcoholics can go on the water wagon. In fact, many of them feel that they have to, for a while at least, to prove to others that they don't really need alcohol. So don't be lulled into a false sense of security simply because you know you can "lay off the stuff" temporarily.

And don't labor under the delusion that you can't become an alcoholic because you drink only beer. There are alcoholics who have managed to drink their way into an almost habitual state of intoxication on beer alone. There are many changes in your drinking pattern which should tell you whether you have become an alcoholic. An alcoholic is distinguished from a frequent or steady drinker by his attitude. Generally we concede that

United States had a large fleet of Nautilus-type submarines, it would have no cause to fear Soviet Russia, unless Soviet Russia had a similar fleet.

Also our work with missiles is producing a total change not only in the logistics of war but in the logic of international relations. We can now fire a shot anywhere in the Soviet Universal State. Even if we assume that Soviet Russia can fire a shot anywhere in the United States, we know that we can strike back

In fact, it is possible that we might even strike first. Therefore, if any country wishes to make war on the nations of Western civilization, it must recognize that it will be a war of retaliation and that it will be fought no matter how much of Western territory is devastated.

If this reasoning is correct, we may have found the road to peace by the diverse process of being absolutely ready for the most devastating war in our history. The very existence of this condition is bound to alter our civilization in many respects because until all sides have ceased to prepare for war, the controls of government over man must

His unsuccessful effort in 1931 to open an Arctic submarine route in an antiquated undersea boat contributed mightily to the triumph last August of the atomic-powered Nautilus, which negotiated the passage under the North Pole icecap without inci-

Thus it is that modern man reaps harvests planted by his elders-sifts the results of their efforts, adds the advances they make possible, and steadily pushes his frontiers.

The road to the polar wastes is being cleared, and when it is paved another valuable source of scientific knowledge and even material things will have been tapped. The name of Sir Hubert Wilkins will be on one of its mileposts.

Pioneer Info Is Valuable

Much important data was relayed back from Pioneer III in its incomplete trip into space-information which has added materially to the scientific store of lore preparing man for his first space flight. The 15-pound missile, compactly fitted with instruments, has given Army scientists badly needed information concerning the radiation layer encircling the earth.

As in previous attempts to reach the moon, there is a natural letdown in the failure of the Jupiter propelled Pioneer III to reach the proximity of the moon, but it was a failure not unexpected.

Both top Army missile men, Dr. Werhner von Braun and Dr. William Pickering, indicated they were pleased at least with the additional history they had compiled in the latest space adventure. Dr. von Braun voiced the belief mistakes on this

Slip of Tongue Going To Cost Defendant $5

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)-A slip of the tongue is going to cost 33year-old Francisco Garcia an extra $5 in Municipal Court. Garcia was before Judge George N. Kiroff today on charges of drunk driving and going the wrong way on a one-way street.

He convinced the judge he could not speak English and Mary Flores, a Spanish-speaking employe of the auditor's office, was called in as interpreter.

During 15 minutes of laborious interpretation, Garcia pleaded innocent and insisted he had not been drinking.

Suddenly, Police Prosecutor Robert Franklin barked out a question in English: "How much did you have to drink?" "Two glasses of wine," Garcia snapped back-in English.

Judge Kiroff convicted Garcia ter's fee when he passes sentence.
